

PSYCH WARD:

Patient Mikato

IN THIS TEXT, I WILL BE USE THEIR INITIALS AND THEIR BIOLOGICAL GENDER FOR THE RESPECT OF THEIR PERSONAL DATA.

EVEN THEY HURT ME, I LOVE THEM.

I ALSO WILL GIVE MY DIAGNOSTIC BUT THIS DATA IS NOT IN OFFICAL MEDICAL RECORDS, THIS IS BASED ON MY FINDINGS AND INFORMATION GATHERED FROM INTERACTION & OBSERVATION.

I have already accepted that I am going to psych ward, I have been restrained with a police style. My mind went blank and I laughed without a reason. When I was being carried by two people, I didn't protest because there's no reason to escape from it.

The car is being brought in front of the house where I lived, I didn't focus on their faces, and it looks like a faceless creature. The car started and headed to the emergency room where there's a isolation room that looks like a prison room. I brought it there and I'm tired of that day.

I been thinking about my future there, I almost never thought of my breakup, my lower grades in college, or my injured eye. I be still there for minutes but then there's doctor and an intern that arrived and wants me to tell my mind condition.

I always ask this question first:

"Can I have a validation that we have patient to doctor confidentiality?"

Two of them said yes and I told my whole story.

My story is that I been struggled to recover from my horrible breakup with C☹️☐☐●✕■ℳ and in addition to my struggles, I am currently studying for my degree in Computer Engineering and a major renovation that I need to be quick in decision making for it to be in order of what I wanted to be achieved. From all the struggles, my life became harder and I cannot control my emotions. From what I said earlier in my problems, that's only for the major part and there's a minor part that I, myself, still struggle with even today. My progress on being a transgender is still active but it's being paused. My projects and upcoming task are being paused. My courses are being paused and skipped.

Since my emotion cannot control,

I harm and cut my whole left arm with razors, clean or not;

I been in manic condition where I punch my sister, throw 2 liters of plastic container that filled with water to my mother and

I threaten my father with 700 psi HPA airsoft that will almost be similar to airgun or a 9mm pistol.

My father arrived in my temporary room; I ask one thing that I don't want to let my mother see my condition right now.

He follows it

We had a peaceful chat of me going to Psych ward, I understand that this will be my life for a couple of days, weeks or maybe months so I told all the things that he will do in the house and in my college.

He agrees to do it but he ask one question:

"Do you love me?"

"I love you like I love everyone, I see everyone as equal" replied to his question

It's true, I see everyone equal, even C☞☐☐●(■ℳ, x(☞☐mℳ■ℳ or x*(☞☐d*(☞■, the three in which is my past relationship or so I thought. Of course the recent one is a disrespectful, NPD, type of person and as of writing in this text I still stands of what I think.

Tests are being done such as blood chem, urine, and my eye.

And after that, total isolation.

I am thinking that what my life could be in psych ward, is there many crazy people that will tend to hurt me? Or a nurse that will do me harm? And in addition to many problems that I had in those recent times.

That early morning, the wheelchair arrives, I am getting admitted to psych ward for the first time

The corridor in which I walk before due to being an outpatient to checkup in my psychiatrist is being remembered while I was being pulled there. I instantly got depressed and thought that I didn't know I will have in this stage of life.

When I see the main door with a big title "Department of Psychiatric", this is the moment where my life starts in psych ward.

The hospital is semi government private that where veterans and inactive army are being treated for free, I just got referred to this by my guidance officer in my high school days. It's quite nice, Big, and have nature in this crowded smoky city.

The wheelchair stops, I stand and they give me clothes that will be my main clothes for a couple of days. Of course, it will be washed and changed but it will be mentioned later.

My old clothes are sent to my parents, and all my necessary items will be sent in Psych ward at the same day. I took Lithium Carbonate in nurse station because I have Bipolar Disorder TYPE 2

I been sent to male ward and met three persons:

PATIENT CH (Male)

Age: 33

Diagnosis: Brain Damage

PATIENT LD (Female)

Age: 60+

Diagnosis: Schizophrenia with nervous breakdown

I sat in a chair that is close to the nurse station. When I was waiting for vital signs (bp, oxygen, temp), LD said:

"You come back already Cristina?" in annoying way.

"Why you come back? Did you do something horrible"

"REDACTED,REDACTED,REDACTED, will come back here"

My biological name is not Cristina but it's close because of its initial to my name. I was quite scared that I heard that.

And then after many minutes of waiting, I been sent to male ward and then I met CH, I am very scared that he will do something horrible, but the nurse assures me that he is not violent patient.

His eye is wide and his face is neutral that similar to a person who is dumbfounded or retarded face.

He said:

"Don't be annoying" he said these many times.

And then I just took a nap.

After a couple of hours, someone shouted

"CHOW!"

It means that it's mealtime, I go there with CH and some of the patients to the dining area to eat. The food is quite nice but of course it's bland, I don't care about its bland but it's very well diet if it doesn't consume much.

CH is stubborn in meal; he didn't even eat the meal, and the nurse forced him to eat. He didn't listen because he's retarded.

"Who's the annoying now?" in my thoughts.

When I get my meal, I get confused, where's the spoon? And then the nurse gave me a plastic spoon, but it needs to be kept rather than offering it again. It should be properly washed and kept in each of its own cabinet. The nurse also gave me a cup for liquid substances.

I understood the task and ate my meal.

It was wonderful meal

After the meal, we got free time to wander around. I wanted that day to observe what patients like me to do. There's a poster where it's listed which time and activity will do.

After asking questions to nurses about the daily life of a patient in psych ward. I just went into my place.

Male ward is quite big, it 10 times or even more than my room. It got couple of hospital bed mattresses and bedframe with cabinet each for personal belongings. It also have bathroom with 4 toilet, 2 urinals, and 3 showers but since 3 persons are in male ward, we got to communicate in which one will use.

My items are blankets, baskets that will be held with hygiene items, a cup, and a plastic spoon. We didn't get pillow for security and safety issues.

CH also has minimal items like I did, but his hobby are getting water from the sink in the bathroom which disturbs his digestive system. Maybe this is also why he doesn't want to eat

After that I finished arranging my things at that moment, I began to cry, that was the first cry that I have since I captured it from my room.

Did I cry because my parents sent me here?

No because I feed their mind to let me be here before.

Did I cry because of my major problems.

Yes.

And then the nurse arrives at me to check it on me, His name is R, he has quite gayish personality but is muscular enough to be the muscle of the department.

He asks why I sent it here

I sent the simplest information

And I ask what patients do in this department,

He told me that I was unlucky because I been admitted in Sunday which no activity given by student nurses because this activity will be held from Monday to Friday.

Saturday and Sundays are very limited because there's no activity to be done.

And then it got cut because it's close ward in which they lock the door of the ward for the visitors and outpatients.

I cried and CH tells me why I am crying, I didn't tell it because I'm too tired that day.

At night, I already know the routine when it's time to eat, 5pm is too early for me to eat

In each meal, I didn't finish it because I still focus on losing weight while I'm in the institution.

And there's the time to take medicine before sleep, I took quetiapine 300 mg and agomelatine.

And then after it, it's closed ward and I am forced to sleep due to the medicine.

The next day was very horrible.

I woke up dehydrated by medicine, my mind and body felt like I'm going to pass out, I walk like a drunk. I called the nurse to give me water; they gave me 2 cups of water and then I go back to sleep.

That feeling still haunts me

After a sleep, a shout came

"BP!"

It was called for vital signs in the morning; we needed to go to the chair near the nurse station. The interns are using their equipment to get the patient's vital sign data.

I was already exhausted because of what I felt that night.

After it was done, some interns interviewed each patient

This is typical question they ask:

"How are you?"

"What are you thinking right now?"

"Are you thinking of hurting someone?"

"or hurting yourself or even suicide?"

"Are you having hallucinations or hearing something?"

"Where are you right now"

"When did your bowel yesterday?"

In my condition, they add to ask of how's my eye.

And that would become the one of the routines of my life in psyche.

Living in psych ward is hard, scary and unpredictable but my curiosity strikes harder, so I tried to observe more.

There's time that CH wanted to touch my breast in the middle of the night and I caught him trying, he jump scare that I awake and goes back to his bed. I tried to calm him but he was too embarrassed.

PATIENT RE (MALE) :

Age: 79

Diagnose: Schizophrenia with PTSD.

I am quite keen to know RE because he is a war veteran that serves in US NAVY during the Vietnam war, An Admiral of the ship. Class of 65 in Philippine Military Academy, Finished degree in Political Science and Law. The person who can possibly run to be a president. But I heard that he got PTSD because all his crewmate died and he is the one who is still alive with a ship, he escapes and got stranded on an island for 4 months. What a cruel scenario that even I cannot comprehend that feeling. That feeling of survival, sadness and guilt.

He has its own helper there; there's two of them alternating every 2 days since the primary helper cannot do it in that long run because RE is very bossy.

Now, he has been a regular in the psych ward since 2016, No one will dare to take care of him that long because of his military issued body that still impressive that he has greater grip to the point that he can break my bones.

RE is mostly the grandfather I had in psych ward. I never have met my grandfather since both died at an early age. Although I respect the ranks, the knowledge, the achievements. I never respect his personality.

PATIENT LD is my "best friend" in psych ward since she was literally nonviolent in the area.

She said that she has been possessed by Jesus Christ, Mama Mery, and Sto. Nino.

She does high pitch IF Sto. Nino wants to control her

She has imaginary character that we cannot see, first one is Bryan who is a doctor, an angel, and her boyfriend that is always breakup and getting together as always. She said that his mother died of cancer, leukemia and he must burial her in Nueva Ejicia.

There's also part where she discussed that she's pretty that everyone wants her, but we didn't see. She is also Cinderella, Snow white, and White lady. She also saw dwarfs and in addition to that, she feeds the dwarfs by placing bread into his cabinet and after she wakes up, the bread has been eaten by dwarfs.

Every day, she always have different story so that's one of my entertainments in the ward.

Patient RE is always in the recreational room because he's going to watch Air supply, army advocates, and his favorite and nonstop playing "Sweetnotes" which is name of the band who covers old songs, Me and the nurses are too annoyed by listening to that always to the point that I heard in the nurse station that even they go home, they still heard the band.

PATIENT STP (Female):

AGE: 30-40

Diagnose: Schizophrenia

This patient is shy, but I never knew that she had schizophrenia. She talks humbly and calmly, but her story is quite sad. She supposed to become a professional nurse, but she stops because of financial and work outside country especially the Arab Country where she becomes a helper and a caretaker of the rich prince, but she is fired because she didn't do it well.

As for me, in first week of living in psych ward is quite painful, not because of my peers but my problems. Firstly, the breakup, my college, and the renovation of my room. But the main problem in those days is my eye. Every time it got worse to the point that I no longer see my left trauma eye. I was begging to the highest that I hope it is not end.

I met my former psychiatrist, Doctor GO; she was shocked that I am here and got skinnier. She said that she wanted to talk to me, but it never happened.

Doctor GO is still my psychiatrist but since she's retired and only consults, my main psychiatrist is Doctor KM. I talk to him if he wanted to see me. His words are very simple, and the way of his talk is quite slow

I saw the chair where I waited as a outpatient, I cried because instead of being outpatient, I am here in psych ward as a patient.

I checkup to the eye center in the same hospital. I always call there after all the outpatients are gone.

There was a painful day when the senior intern of the psych ward told me that my eye will be possible to die.

For what I understand is that. My eye is being trauma because of me gunsmithing my airsoft. My accidents are quite rare in fact; I told too many airsoft gunsmiths and players that they never heard nor had that before.

The way of that accident is that I tried to fire my AEG airsoft gun with me seeing the hop chamber below the rifle in which magazine is inserted there. There's 0.2g of bbs at least 3 pieces and my weapon fires at 500+ fps.

Instead of the bbs going out of the chamber, it goes to my eye. My left eye.

I think of the senior intern who talk to me is a death messenger.

After that, the doctor declares and makes it official that I may have larger chance to lose my eye but by operating my eye, it MAY have slightly chance to come back to its own 20 grade vision.

She may also say that if they did the operation, they guarantee that it may only have blur vision and not get enough clear.

This is one of the most depressing moments in my life, the sensitive part of the human body in which I use every day will be gone.

I pray to the highest that I beg for him for healing to make my eye see again.

I talked to my father about it, and he wants me to do operation because at least we did what we could do.

There's an activity in the recreational room that the student nurse provide that its content is what could I be "Hold on" and to "let go" I said the deepest word. I tried to hold on my left eye, and I wanted to let go all the things I angered at my parents. I wanted to cry that day, but I couldn't because it was painful.

The room is silence. Everyone didn't know what they would react to.

This is the part where it introduces me to "treatment room" where the former 5 "isolation room" that puts violent patient in straight jacket in a room with foam and one bed.

I heard when the nurse of the department talks about the treatment room or TR in short, the isolation room and straight jacket are thing in the past and it's been abolished since it is inhumane and it make the patient worse like for example, if they lay down, some cannot get up. The treatment room in which the small corridor of entering the isolation room is the main "isolation room" where patient with IV bags and violent people are being there.

For those patients like me who have IV bags they need to be there for their safety not to remove the needle adaptor. Patients who are tagged as violent will be tied up in bed and restrained.

I have been chosen to go to operation room and my last meal before I insert a IV bag is moist, the rice had liquid like soup and there's no hard food.

PATIENT J (Male)

*Age:*30-40

Diagnose: Alcohol rehabilitation.

Patient J is my inspiration to TR; He endures 13 days in TR for his family. Before I was in TR, he always seeks communication and I always tell me to "let's heal up "

He told me that TR is the worst case. He doesn't have anything to do besides lying in bed thinking about anything, eat, bath and toilet, and sleeping. But his strength and motivation are from his family, he wanted to be a better father for them.

He later told me that he will be moving to Italy since his wife lives and work there. We imagine what would be if he lives there and what Italy will be offer to him. We think that pizza, coffee, and place are quite nice there, but wine are also the things that Italy proud of. He laughs that he may drink again but he contradicts it because he doesn't want to bring back his former self.

So, there I was, going to TR for the first time.

Me and J are going to switch places, I'm going to TR while he finishes his dosage and moves to male ward. He asked if he could sleep in my bed and I accepted his request.

"Good luck in there" He replies.

The nurse asked me where I wanted to put the needle adaptor for IV bags, J advised me that I should put it in my arm rather than in my hand to make the needle adapter not accidentally removed.

The nurse injected me in the arm and told me that I have a large vein, he adds that most nurses like large veins since it's easy to insert the needle adapter.

After that, it was silence.

The silence and the free time to think.

My bed is in the middle of the TR, with incline bed frame, a adjustable table and 24/7 lights that direct through me. I ask the nurses to switch off the lights, but they don't want to because the surveillance camera will not capture me in the dark.

It was the first day of TR and I was struggled to sleep, to do anything and the time is much longer than I was in male ward. The hours felt like days.

Since I have much time to do, I need to think for me to not become crazy. I'm thinking of my problems that I have left in my room; the breakups, the renovation; and my studies. Some minor problems are also included since I really need to do something. Some of them are: what's my opinion on me being a transgender, what life could I be when I wanted to become an army, what would my life in the future, and why I am here in this institution.

I pray for the highest that I need miracle for my eye to function like it was before, I pray more.

After that long day in TR, it was the next day, The Operation.

They will take me to the Operation Room where I change my clothes into gown. After that, I see my parents once again pray.

I asked the nurses there if I wanted to pray for the hands that will use to operate on my trauma eye. They agree.

They take me to the room and strap me in the surgical bed for me to be still while doing the operation. The room is very cold, and I heard a good jazz sound, and it's made me a bit calm. There's a very large Microscope that branded to Leica for them to see clearly.

While I was being strapped, I prayed for them and this session that I seek miracles, guidance and support.

And then the anesthesia kicked in, I didn't know that I was already in and I slept.

When I woke up, I was in the other bed near the operation area, and I was a bit high. My left eye has bandage. I ask the intern and doctor nicely, is the session good? They said it was wonderful and success. I ask that if there's a video of my eye being operated and they can't answer that, but they try to give me the video.

It was 15-30 minutes of operation and after that, they took me out to operation room and transferred me back to TR where I'll sit there for 4 days.

When I arrived in the TR, I was laying in bed, hoping that my left eye would come back.

After a couple of hours. My left eye is in pain. I was in agony and begged the nurses for their assistance. I scream and shout at them begging to ask for painkillers such as paracetamol.

My room mate there is also in agony that his back is wet.

When the nurse heard my agonize call, they gave me 2 pills of paracetamol and one biscuit which my parents sent.

I wanted to cry that day, but I couldn't because it was too painful.

TR is very painful mentally. The silence and the urge to do something cannot be done there.

Minutes become hour, hour become days and days become weeks. That felt very painful. I wanted to do something such as reading but my doctor wouldn't recommend and he wanted to make my eye rest.

There's still routine.

BP, interview, meal, take medicine, and sleep.

There's one night that there's a senior nurse that wants to talk to me. She just heard a story about my roommate.

PATIENT A (MALE)

AGE: 70+

Diagnose: Blind, Deaf, Alzheimer.

This person's story is much more depressing than all the patients in the psych ward. He just left and abandoned the Emergency Room from his family. Since he is an army veteran, his medical and care in the hospital are free of charge. The doctors determine his condition that he is having Alzheimer because he asked his mother for banana.

The senior nurse told me that we have been blessed that we are still in good condition rather than him. She also adds that his Alzheimer are the blessings of his to make him not depressed and not think about anything.

He is only a living organism without consciousness.

After that, I was thinking about what she said. I try to accept what the outcomes of the operation would be.

After the operation, they check my eye in the eye center.

Since I was in psych ward, I wear gown and most of the outpatients in the eye center have a bad look about me. I didn't care.

They check and upon score of tests in my eye. It was quite painful because of the light, the equipment touching my eyes and everything.

After many tests, they forgot to bandage my eye . My eyes are tired that day.

And the 5 days of agonizing, depressing days in the TR are over. I was out and transfer to male ward.

CH and J are already left in the psych ward.

I felt relieved because CH is the person that might be hurting me and felt hopeful for J that he will be a better man to his family.

When I was getting showered, nurse the name E gave me an instruction on how to since I can't shower my head due to the post operated eye.

They bandaged my eye again but this time, it was waterproof. When I get showered, I get relieved because I am fresh again. The gel that they put in my hair, the dirt and everything is being removed. I was relieved.

Nurse E is like a mother in the psych ward. She is not that strict, and her actions are much more valid than other nurses'.

There's a former patient arrived in the hospital

PATIENT RC (MALE)

AGE: 30+

Diagnose: Minor Schizophrenia with Bipolar Type 2

He is somewhat I called an "Anime/ Game Otaku". He is fat and weighted 113kg, Unhygienic, High pride and too sexual, and lazy. He always smokes and drinks 6 instant coffee every day. He also eats unhealthy foods and lived with his parents. His siblings gave PHP 45000 for the house and rent so his earnings from jobs are from his only. He is also the father of a son who is 6 years old, but his wife and kid left him due to his horrible father's figure. He also spends over PHP 600,000 in Ragnarök and night crawl because he hears voices that leads him to spend more. He is shut in person and always plays games

He is too disrespectful to the female staff especially the beautiful ones. The first action that he made is to ask a student nurse that

"Miss, are you believing that age doesn't matter?" or there's a nurse name "Princess" and he call this nurse

"My Princess"

Most often, he waits in the crossroads of the corridor where most beautiful nurses are in and around. He always waits for that beautiful doctor in which she had a Chinese blood, fine skin and skinny.

Every time during the student nurse's activity there's a task that the nurse will take care of their assigned patient.

All the time, I got the most beautiful nurse. While he got a quite decent nurse. He always got jealous of me because of it.

I disgust this person; he literally looks like a reddit or discord mod.

Also, he is bullied from all elementary schools to college since he smells and is fat. He didn't do anything to improve himself.

I tried to understand him but the more I heard his story, it became worse. I understood that it's hard to handle those things since I felt that in my younger days but all the years, he wasted are making himself worse.

He admits to the psych ward again because of his parents. He thinks he is supposed to go to the Department of Psychiatrist as a outpatient but he is shocked that he became a patient again.

He is already a former patient in the department, he spends 3 weeks in the psych ward and after a 1 week in his parent's house, he is admitted to the psych ward again.

Every Monday to Friday, there's always student nurse who is on the job training and giving activities. There are two schools held in these activities; one from the morning and one from the afternoon.

It always has exercises first and 2 activities to be done and after all of that, there's thing called Nurse to Patient Interaction or NPI. In the morning, almost all the nurses are quite fond of what I tell my stories and my knowledge. To be honest, I see them only as equal as me. It became more and more listeners from my assigned nurse to almost all of them are keen to listen.

But I have a routine that every time I tell a story, I always assure the patient to doctor confidentiality where it only revokes IF it's life threatening.

In the student nurse who assigned on the afternoon, during the NPI session. I ask again about the patient to doctor confidentiality and since the three of us are in the plastic table, I called it "The table" where everything and every information says are stay ONLY in this table.

They have many questions and even rare once that I always answer.

Every time I always get tired.

After many days in the psych ward, my eyes are improving quite a lot. I have high hopes that it will be better. Many visitors such as 3 pastors, my guidance councilor from high school, my auntie that have his son go to Philippine Military Academy. My cousin, my teammate from the airsoft group, hopes that my eye and my condition will be better in this Psych Ward and the result from the test in the eye center is getting improved always.

My days in the psych ward after the operation and the horrible session in the TR are getting better. I have the freedom to showered and my mood is getting better. I'm interacting with nurses and doctors to the point that the conversation is more casual than professional medical operation.

There's couple of junior and senior interns that I communicate with, and it always becomes more casual to the point that the questions that they need to ask me are already being asked or they forgot it that even myself ask myself the question that they need. They also asked me for non-medical information such as information about AI or what my opinion about games and philosophy is.

I asked Doctor KM about me having privilege to read in the library, he accepts my request and I read two books.

WHO IS THE FIRST?

This is scientific information about who is the one or even the earliest idea of that topic that discuss every chapter like for example: The gold making can be found in the earliest in the Egyptians or in Rome and in China.

I dropped this book because it became duller to me the more I read.

THE GIRL NAME JULES

The book concepts about a girl named Jules, she was beautiful person that lived in different places with many unhealthy relationships she encountered from the moment she was 13 years old up to being young adult. She also has experience being raped, seen naked kissed by older people in the lip. She has struggles to know herself and her viewpoint of relationship.

TLDR; she's a confused Narcissistic Personality Disorder (NPD) bitch like my former relationship ☹️☐☐●)(■ℳ

I got quite enjoy reading it and my first book that I finished in my whole life. It was also a book that let me read while walking around in large recreational room.

This book also the ones who help me recover from trauma that I had with Patient RE.

The trauma that Patient RE gives me is that he always has an episode where he shouts and gets angry. He mumbles and angers at everything he thinks in his mind and it's different each episode.

It was lunch where these days, all the schizophrenic patients like LD,STP and RE are having intense hallucinating episode and this is the time where TR is almost full capacity.

Patient STP are having tremors, her eyes are white, and shout like a demon possession.

Patient LD felt some demon wants her take down from her bed in female ward and in the female bathroom

Patient RE has intense episode to the point where his helper doesn't have enough sleep.

Patient RC has been in the TR because he mocks and threatens the nurse that he will break the door if he can't smoke.

And there's former patient that arrived in TR:

PATIENT M (MALE) :

AGE: 30+

Diagnostic: Alcohol Rehabilitation.

This is the former patient from psych ward who volunteered to go because he got drunk and he wanted his wife to be happy, so he did this. He already has been rehabilitated in Manila for 13 months and has been in psych ward since 2016.

There's another patient that is temporarily admitted but got leave due to her condition

PATIENT MI (FEMALE)

Age: 30+

Diagnostic: major depressive, anti-social

This patient is just admitted two days. She got into the TR because she wanted to be alone. I talk to her about herself and she is an artist who has been practicing impressionist art, painting and fostering stray cats. Her way of talking is "Conyo" or mixed Tagalog and English in rich like matter.

She have many privileges that is not permitted in the psych ward like a pillow and a large book full of artistic arts and realism.

During the conversation, she mentions Vincent Van Gogh and his life in asylum where he paints. This sparts my mind that maybe she try to copy Vincent Van Gogh.

She didn't have longer stay because of the incident.

The incident in which the TR is having 4 patients including her. She showers in the bathroom, but Patient M wants to pee, take note that Patient M is freshly admitted and drunk. M wants to go to Bathroom and MI shout. M didn't even reach the door and then MI cried and claimed that M saw her naked body while showering. MI and nurses disagree because there's surveillance camera in the TR but since MI is stressed in the TR and didn't want to go female ward, she's been discharged quickly.

Anyways, Let's go back when Patient RE traumatized me

It was full capacity at the TR, Me and the nurses are shocked that almost all the patients were in the TR and me and RE are the only one in the ward.

I always joke that maybe me and RE are going to TR because we are the ones that left.

And then there's lunchtime, RE have PTSD episode but there's no indicators since he mumbles quietly that day.

I tried to tell him that we should do our best not in TR.

And then I tried to shake her hands.

Suddenly, His other hand Grabs my arm and tells

"Do you want to kill me huh?"

I instantly panic and tell him

"No, I am not, you are almost a grandfather to me"

While his helper cannot help me, Re just releases my hand.

I was in trauma and after eating, he still angers at me, and I try not to cry in the male ward.

Since It's close ward, I ask the nurse that let me and Re have separated and transfer me to recreational room for a mean time, they accept my request and there I was.

I was crying in the recreational room and my arm in which RE touch is still there. It was like I felt it even if there's no one touching it so my first aid is to touch rapidly that arm and instantly open and close my arm in order not to remember it.

I see my arm very weak and has a minor tremor.

Then the nurse gives me privilege to watch but I don't accept so I give the privilege to bring the book "The girl called Jules" in there and it distracts me from my trauma.

It was my first time reading books while walking around in recreational room alone. It was fun

And the next day , DOCTOR GO and KM declared to me that I can be discharged from the psych ward, they see that I improved from the moment I been admitted, to being challenged in my eye and to the last days of me in psych ward.

But they want me to have a psychological test since it was cheaper to do it right now than after my dismissal in psych ward.

But first, I have an interview with social service for discount given by the government.

I said my story to her but the main topic in that session is what my viewpoint as a transgender.

My viewpoint is that I accepted my biological self in order to remove gender dysmorphia in my mind and I didn't focus that much and not in a hurry because I wanted to be more respectable. I told most people in my community have different viewpoints and it's different from mine.

I discuss more about transgender and she tells a story about his 2 gay brothers that she asks if they will wear short skirt or somewhat almost naked.

I never wanted much of that.

So, we had a nice chat in the interview and thanked me for having this rare opportunity to chat like that.

And the psychological test was very tiring because I just made it twice as hard for it to have a better result. The Doctor who happens to be a airsoft has a nice chat on airsoft and in my eye. It finishes in 2 days and I'm tired.

I also had nice chat with the helper of Patient RE that he motivates to take care of him because of the beautiful nurses but not in a way that patient RC does, he is more shy and respectable.

There's so happens that one day, I am in the entrance of library and Patient RE saw me, He see me in minutes with a worry in his eye but didn't talk.

And then the last day of my life in psych ward. When I was visited before, I ask my father to bring Pancit for the nurse as a thankful to them and when me and M are chatting about his life in rehabilitation, his life in psych ward and the incident of M and MI, I see the exit door of my mother and my father have White plastic bag filled with Pancit in a plastic container.

That would be the call for me to leave on psych ward.

I change my clothes into civilian outfit.

I pray for the RC and M in their recovery; I pray for the patient in psych ward to be healed and Patient A that his life would be in peace.

I thank the nurses, the doctors and the student nurses for their support.

They given me instructions on what I do outside of the psych ward

And
